

Resource Center for Parent and Children WIC Program

The RCPC WIC Program is located in Fairbanks, which is the second largest urban city in the state located within the Fairbanks North Star Borough (FNSB). The FNSB covers 7,361 square miles in the Tanana River Valley of the interior region of Alaska. There are two first class cities located within the borough boundaries (Fairbanks and North Pole) and two military installations (Fort Wainwright and Eielson Air Force Base). There are several other smaller communities in the FNSB with a distance of up to 60 miles between some borough neighborhoods and the city of Fairbanks.

The RCPC WIC Program is just one of the Resource Center for Parents and Children's numerous programs offered to the community. Promoting healthy families is at the heart of each program RCPC offers. They provide support, information, and education. They encourage parents to develop strong parenting skills- skills that are vital to the well being of parents, children, and the family unit as a whole. The Resource Center for Parents and Children is a place for parents to get more on-the-job training!
